

Man who used drone to deliver barbecue sausage to friend in hot tub could be fined

Authorities in Australia are investigating a man who used a drone to pick up a sausage from a barbecue and deliver it to a friend in a hot tub.

The man faces a £5,600 [$AUS9,000] fine after he posted a video on YouTube which showed him sitting at home and piloting a drone which travelled over a busy motorway before descending to collect the cooked sausage from a barbecue – or “sausage sizzle” - at a hardware store in Melbourne. The video has since been removed.

Australia’s Civil Aviation Safety Authority said it was investigating the incident over concerns the flight breached rules 00000dman dronse fromdenertingpopulousa arwas orflyingwith in33 yhars [30e
